

Alkanes can be formed by hydrogenation reactions of alkenes and alkynes. There are two types of reactions in which alkynes undergo hydrogenation but stop at the alkene. Using resources, structures, mechanisms, drawings etc. explain the 2 sets of reactions conditions. Use acetylene as the starting alkyne.

Solution: